

Jon

Mr. Ferrell

Language Arts

January 8, 2009

Let Me Have A Cell Phone Please!

Please let me have a cell phone. I know that you'll probably say no to this question so I wrote some reasons why you should let me have a cell phone. I'll be responsible. Please read these ideas.

Reason number one is for calling people not all the time but if I need to talk to them. I could call our family, my friends, and so I don't have to nag you to drive me to another place like my friends house. This would probably save you some money on gas for the car. I might want to go to grandma's house. Anyway if that didn't change your mind then I have two more suggestions.

A cell phone could be used for emergencies. I wonder if I fall down some stairs or if my hair catches on fire. You get the point, I might be lost. I wonder if a crook who robs our house only took dad's guitar and left his retainer. Who would I call if our home phone was not working? First, I would be freaked out so I would try to call the police but the phones out.

We should go onto the third point then I assume? This is just some reasons that I would have a cell phone. For one I might want to text you, "I love you." I would pay for it. You could talk to me when you need to. I could tell you where I am if I'm going to Devin's house. These are just some tiny ideas.

Thank you for reading this paper. I hope you will change your mind so I can text,
I mean talk, to my friends. Remember there is a chance that I might die! Do you care about saving money or your child's safety?